FOLLOW OUR RECOMMENDED ROUTES OR CREATE YOUR VERY OWN STROLL THROUGH THE CITY

Discover Freiburg Step by Step!

Freiburg's old town has awe-inspiring sights, narrow little streets, historical buildings and lively places - we want to take you with us on a discovery tour through 900 years of the city's history and through a city that is modern and young, nevertheless. You can simply follow our route or take a detour wherever and whenever you please.

We begin at the Rathausplatz (Town Hall Square) in the middle of the city: The Altes Rathaus (Old Town Hall) 10, once the location of the town clerk, is particularly impressive with its red facade and its Tourist Infomation offers a point of contact for your questions and wishes. Just next door is the Neues Rathaus (New Town Hall) 10, which served as a lecture building for the University of Freiburg until the end of the 19th century. Where Freiburg's municipal leaders now meet was once a place of anatomy and polyclinics. Directly across stands Martinskirche (St. Martin's Church) 24. It was built around 1300 and was a monastery church of the nearby Franciscan monastery until 1783. There is a very special legend surrounding Berthold Schwarz, the most famous monk at the time: As an alchemist, it is said that he discovered gunpowder by accident. At the foot of his fountain monument in the middle of the Rathausplatz (Town Hall Square), the coats of arms of Freiburg and its partner cities shine as elaborate mosaics. Many such works made from colorful rhinestone decorate Freiburg's old town and the entrances to many stores at the same time. It is worth taking a look down!

Here we can linger in one of the cafés or stroll on to the left past St. Martin's Church through the Franziskanerstraße to the Haus zum Walfisch (The Whale House) 6 with its magnificent late-Gothic doorway. Built by Grand Treasurer Emperor Maximilian I, it housed the famous humanist Erasmus von Rotterdam between 1529-1531. We now follow the stream and arrive at Basler Hof (Regional Council) 2, one of the most important secular buildings in the city, which since its edification between 1494-1496 has been an important institution. Today, it is the location of Freiburg's regional council. Here on the Kaiser-Joseph-Straße, still called the "Große Gass" ("Large Street") in the Middle Ages, was where the city market would set up at the time. The "Kajo", with its arcade passageways built after the war, is considered Freiburg's strolling and shopping street and invites you to browse around.

Whether you stopped to shop or not, to the right, past the Basler Hof (Regional Council), we can already see the centerpiece of Freiburg, the Münsterplatz (Cathedral Square). Here, from Monday to Saturday, farmers and merchants sell their wares at the Cathedral Market, which is an experience and a delight all in one. Try a long red sausage, the "Lange Rote", drink a glass of wine or enjoy "Stefan's Käsekuchen", the best cheesecake in the city. You can take a stroll here, observe the hustle and bustle of the market and, above all, marvel at Freiburg's highest landmark. In the middle of the plaza, the majestic Freiburger Münster (Cathedral) 25 stands tall with its 380foot tower, once described as "Christianity's most beautiful tower." Built between 1200 and 1513, it has survived multiple wars nearly unscathed - most recently the bombing of Freiburg during WWII and features captivating sights such as the magnificent tympanum in the vestibule, the historic stained glass windows in the nave, and the high alter painted by Hans Baldung Grien.

Here on the south side of the cathedral, the red facade of the Historisches Kaufhaus (Historical Merchants' Hall) 7 really stands out. Decorated with Habsburg sculptures and coats of arms, it was built from 1520-1532 to manage the markets in the city and served as a customs, trade and financial building. Right next to it stands the Erzbischöfliches Palais (Archiepiscopal Palace) 4 with its richly dec-The Wentzingerhaus (Museum of Municipal History) 21, further east on the plaza, was built in 1761 as the "Residence on the Beautiful Corner" by painter, architect and sculptor Johann Christian Wentzinger and houses the museum of the city's history today. The "House of Baden Wines" is an absolute must for all wine lovers and connoisseurs: the Alte Wache 1 with the yellow facade invites you to taste and enjoy several Freiburg wines. It is worth it to linger here. When to get back on your route is totally up to you!

Anyone feeling a bit curious or "wunderfitzig", as we say, can continue on past the Cathedral Workshop on Herrenstraße, where you will find the Erzbischöfliches Ordinariat (Archiepiscopal Ordinariate) 3, one of the superb structures of late historicism in Baden. After passing through the narrow Münzgasse, we arrive at one of the most beautiful streets in Freiburg, the Konviktstraße. With its curved route, it was a lively artisan street in the Middle Ages. Today it invites you to wanderstroll around looking at the charming house facades and small boutiques. We stroll on leisurely and arrive at the Schwabentor (Swabian Gate) 11. Built in the middle of the 13th century; it is the younger of the two remaining gates and its facade tells the legend of the Swabian who once tried to buy the city but with no success. If you would like to take a detour into nature, it is just five minutes away! From here, it is worth walking over the Schwabentorsteg to the Schlossberg to take and enjoy in the priceless view of Freiburg. Anyone interested in a break instead can try out some Baden specialties in the numerous restaurants such as, for example, in Germany's oldest hotel, the inn "Zum Roten Bären" [4].

In Freiburg, everything is a can, not a must. Freiburg's upper old town is worth every step over the cobblestones with its Gewerbekanal stream, the Gerberau and Fischerau streets and the "island"! "Little Venice", as the idyllic small street is called, invites you to visit galleries, wander through family-owned stores, spend some time in cozy cafés or watch the crocodile in the canal. Following the canal, we are at the lively Augustinerplatz (Augustine Square) with the former monastery of the Augustine hermits. Built in 1300 and reconstructed in the Baroque style in the 18th century, it has been under renovation for several years and holds Freiburg's most beautiful museum, the Augustinermuseum 16. The upper old town was once the artisans district of Freiburg. Today you can take in the almost Mediterranean charm of the city, cool off your feet in the little canals and watch the hustle and bustle. After a short walk through the Fischerau street, we reach the oldest intact watchtower in the city, Martinstor (Martin's Gate) (8). Used as a prison for a time, it was raised and expanded at the beginning of the 20th century.

Next we pass by Bertoldsbrunnen (Bertold's Fountain), the hub of public transportation, and enter the Bertoldstraße. Here we follow the tram lines toward the university, can admire its history at the Uniseum (University's Museum) 20 and reach the Platz der Alten Synagoge (Old Synagogue Square). This is where traditional meets modern with the eye-catching new Universitätsbibliothek (University Library) 33 and the historical Stadttheater (Theater) 31. It is worth it to take a break on the wooden pedestal and let the active student scene work its magic. Passing though the newly designed Rotteckring, we reach the Colombipark. Not only does it invite you to linger here in the summer, it's also where the Colombischlössle (Colombi Castle) 15 is located. This villa was built for the Countess de Zea Bermudez Y Colombi from 1859-1861 in an English neo-gothic style and today holds the Archäologisches Museum (Archaeological Museum) (15). On the home stretch of our route, we can take a look at the oldest council building in the city on the Turmstraße past the Zunfthaus der Breisgauer Narren (Carnival Museum) 🕡 . The Gerichtslaube (Old Court House) 5, documented as a council building since 1303, is in the inner courtyard behind the Old Town Hall, where our tour started.
